November, 2012 (Cambridge, MA)—The MIT List Visual Arts Center and the Museum of Contemporary Art (MCA) Chicago present Amalia Pica, the artist's first major solo museum exhibition in the United States. The exhibition provides the first in-depth look at the last ten years of this London-based, Argentina-born artist's work.

Using simple materials such as photocopies, light bulbs, drinking glasses, beer bottles, bunting, cardboard, and other found materials, Pica creates sculptures and installations that address fundamental issues of communication—such as delivering and receiving a verbal or nonverbal message—and the various forms communicative exchange may take. Her work is optimistic in its reflection of meaningful and fleeting moments of shared experience, often incorporating the signifiers of celebration and communal gatherings with fiesta lights, party bunting, confetti, as well as through a self-reflective view of art-making, and the translation of thought to action, or idea to object.

Born during Argentina's dictatorship and so-called "Dirty War"—a seven year campaign against suspected dissidents and subversives—Pica long ago became interested in what it means to have a platform from which to speak and the limits and failures of language. Raising questions about individual speech versus collective speech, and extreme political situations such as those in 1970's Argentina, the artist shines light on how open communication is a protected, individual right in some regions of the world while a privilege in others. The exhibition will include Strangers, an in-gallery performance in which performers who have never met before hold a bunting for a specific duration.

had solo exhibitions at Kunst Halle Sankt Gallen (2012), Marc Foxx Gallery, Los Angeles, and Chisenhale Gallery, London (both 2011), and Malmö Konsthall (2010), to name a few. Her work has also been included in numerous group exhibitions such as The Ungovernables at the New Museum (2012), Silence at the Menil Collection (2012), Map Marathon at the Serpentine Gallery (2010), Word Event at the Kunsthalle Basel (2008), and Drawing Typologies at the Stedelijk Museum (2007). One of the most promising artists of her generation, she is a recipient of a CIFO grant from the Cisneros Fontanls Art Foundation, a finalist for the Future Generation Art Prize from the Pinchuk Foundation, and currently artist-in-residence at the prestigious Headlands Center for the Arts outside of San Francisco.

Amalia Pica is co-organized by the MIT List Visual Arts Center, and the Museum of Contemporary Art Chicago. The exhibition was co-curated by João Ribas, Curator, MIT List Visual Arts Center, and Julie Rodrigues Widholm, Pamela Alper Associate Curator at MCA Chicago. The exhibition opens at the MIT List Visual Arts Center and the exhibition will be on view at the MCA Chicago April 27–August 11, 2013.

In conjunction with the exhibition The MIT List Visual Arts Center and the MCA Chicago have produced an illustrated 124-page scholarly catalogue which includes an interview between exhibition curators João Ribas and Julie Rodrigues Widholm, and Amalia Pica, a bibliography and exhibition history of the artist, and images of her work. The publication also includes essays on Pica's work written by Tirdad Zolghadr, a writer and curator who teaches at the Center for Curatorial Studies, Bard College, NY, and Ana Teixeira Pinto, lecturer at Humboldt University (Berlin) and Mousse Magazine contributor.

About the MIT List Visual Arts Center

In 1950 MIT established the Hayden Gallery which was located in the Charles Hayden Memorial Library. The gallery served as a venue for a program of changing exhibitions. In 1985 the Hayden Gallery was renamed the List Visual Arts Center in recognition of a gift from Vera and Albert List that relocated the gallery to its current location on the ground floor of the Wiesner Building.

Over the years the MIT List Visual Arts Center has become highly respected as one of the most significant university art galleries in the country for its innovative, provocative, and scholarly exhibitions and publications. Just as MIT pushes at the frontiers of scientific inquiry, it is the mission of the List Visual Arts Center to explore challenging, intellectually inquisitive, contemporary art making in all media. In addition to presenting 4-6 exhibitions annually, the List Center presents a broad arrange of education programs in conjunction with its exhibition programming. The Center maintains and adds to MIT's permanent collection of 3,500 artworks that includes dozens of publicly sited sculptures and hundreds of paintings, prints, photographs, drawings and sculptures located throughout MIT's campus. The List Center is also responsible for commissioning new works for the MIT Public Art Collection through the MIT Percent-for-Art program, and organizing and administering the Student Loan Art Program, which lends over 500 works of art annually to MIT undergraduate and graduate students.
